

Your setups

Posted by t3h anarchist - 2009/04/12 10:08

So post your paddle setups here, i am interested in trying out some new things. Also, give an explanation of why it is good :D.

Blade: DHS Hurricane King

FH: Tenergy 05

BH: Tenergy 64

All out attacking blade. Pretty fast but good blocking control blade. My FH is mainly for power looping, the tenergy 05 does a good job of that. BH i liek to block, counterloop, smash, loop, etc. but i like it more controlled with spin, the softer tenergy 64 is good for that.

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by elmo51 - 2009/04/12 15:46

my current setup is a nittaku violin and on the fh i am playing with tenergy 05, on my bh i use sriver g3 fx

I like to open with my fh and then finish it of, i also like to play with a lot of control so i can place my oppont out, that is why i use the violin with fast rubbers,

The g3 fx is perfect for the bh, very fast for finishing and blocking and with lots of control for touchshots,

I also have a nittaku tremendous, this is a faster carbon blade and i play with tibhar torpedo soft at the bh, again because of the outstanding control and speed on this blade ,and on the fh the normal g3 from butterfly for a fast and attacking loop/powerplay, but i prefer the violin because i have better control with that frame

I have tried many many rubbers in the last 15 years but the tenergy 05 is the best in my opinion for my FH on an all wood blade

I am very statisfied with the g3 fx to although i only played 3 our 4 times with it till now, it will only get better i think

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by t3h anarchist - 2009/04/12 21:13

similar to mine :D

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by philm87 - 2009/05/04 17:37

Just started playing with the rubbers at the end of March, but been playing with the blade since about September I think:

Blade: Timo Boll Spirit
FH: Tenergy 05
BH: Bryce Speed

Excellent setup for my style of game, it's perfect for close to the table attacking play and still very good at medium distance. Really suits low trajectory shots the most as the speed of the rubbers makes it more difficult to do big loops, especially on the backhand. I'd only really recommend this if you play a very attacking style or want to change the way you play. I've never played with a setup that gives me the confidence in blocking and attacking shot that this does, if i play a shot right I know it'll go where it's supposed to. I'll do proper reviews of the two rubbers soon, but they've got a huge thumbs up so far, quick and spinny, yet controlled.

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by neversolis - 2009/08/30 07:04

i am new here so give me your opinion

i am a two wing loop

blade i switch aroundn the butterfly blades amultart and timo boll blades rubber i use tenergy and soemtimes the new hurricane

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by haehne - 2011/02/23 04:11

blade: keyshot light
fh: bryce 1.9
bh: blowfish, 1.8

first of all the blade is soft, that' s why looping with bryce is great and gives it excellent control! blowfish on the bh is great too since the rubber is quite soft which makes it very controllable too and at the same time the tensor effect makes it "explode" when you need it, really great setup for my game!

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by StefanArak - 2011/02/26 15:47

I have at the moment ready to go:

Stiga Hybrid Wood

FH: Tenergy 05 MAX (black)

BH: Tenergy 64 MAX (red)

It's a great set up which is very fast and highly aggressive, but having used it for a year I am so comfortable with it I feel I have a great touch. Especially on the backhand the tenergy 64 is soft enough and the stiga hybrid wood capable of taking the speed and spin off the ball to perform drop shots, followed by ridiculously fast loop-drives. I love this set up, thought it took some time getting used to.

"Experiment" Blade: Don't even know what it is, it's chinese and I can't read it. It says 'excellent' then some chinese writing on the handle, but I can't read it. I bought it because it was really cheap.

FH: Mendo Energy (1.5)

BH: Joola Poker LP (OX)

This is okay, the cheapest set up I could get to try long pimples. I'm not sure how good it is as I've not used it seriously for any long amount of time, but hey, it's good for a laugh.

Stiga Allaround classic

FH: Sriver L 2.1 (Black)

BH: Sriver S 1.9 (red)

My first blade, I changed from Faster I and faster III on this blade to sriver's but they were in fact very similar. It has amazing control and decent spin, but as I progressed in skill it wasn't fast enough for me. I still get it out to refine my technique from time to time, and the softness and flex in the blade and rubbers really let you get back to basics.

LKT Instinct 7Ply

FH: Andro Roxon 450 (2.1) Black

BH: Sriver S (2.1) Red

I bought this as an offensive blade that I could use as an alternative, but with the tensor on the forehand and the 7 ply rubber not only was it incredibly heavy but it was really unbalanced, and I hated it. Roxon wasn't as spinny as I expected and the blade felt to be lacking something! Sorry to say it anyone who has this blade, perhaps the 5 ply version is better but I just didn't like it. Roxon seemed like a slightly worse version of tenergy!

So these are my current blades at the moment, I have some others locked away in drawers somewhere but tbh I doubt they'll ever see the light of day again!

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by AllezCho - 2011/04/10 02:12

Current setup - I used it for more than a year before I switched to Tenergy, but now I'm switching back to it:

Yasaka Ma Lin Carbon

FH: Tibhar Genius MAX (red)

BH: Stiga Boost TX 2.0 (black)

Former setup - I didn't have enough time to train and get used to Tenergy, so I "gave up" on it...for now:

Butterfly Petr Korbelt

FH: Butterfly Tenergy 05 2.1 (red)

BH: Killerspin Fortissimo MAX (black)

=====

Re:Your setups

Posted by tt2u - 2011/04/12 15:44

I have more than a handful of setups and rotate them to suit my mood. Right now I am using a TBS and a Juic one ply. Rubber-wise I go with BW2 or just Hurricane 3, and something faster on the backhand.

=====