

Inspirit (Dawei)

Posted by admin - 2010/05/09 22:06

This thread discusses the content article: Inspirit (Dawei)

I tried Inspirit a couple of years ago and I liked it for spin - I couldn't believe how much spin I got on it on my serves, and my opponents could hardly handle the spin on my slow loops. I thought the tackiness of it took away from the speed somewhat, so the rubber never really "stuck" with me, as it were.

=====

Re:Inspirit (Dawei)

Posted by john - 2011/03/21 02:49

Hello, it's glad to see you, who had used inspirit.

I saw in many forums and ratings, the conclusion is Dawei Inspirit (or Inspirit Quattro) is very worthy (for the price by considering its quality). Furthermore, some people said Inspirit is good alternative for Bryce. I have a plan to remove Inspirit, its top sheet from sponge. I'll use only its sponge, and for the top sheet I have a good one. We know Bryce for its speed and "bouncy-ness". I think that Dawei sponge is good one, but the top sheet isn't too spinny, so I replace the top sheet.

What do you think? Will my rubber have a good "kick" with good spin?
I really need advice.

Thank you!

=====

Re:Inspirit (Dawei)

Posted by tt2u - 2011/04/08 15:01

I have a sheet of inspirit. It's fast enough but not enough spin for me. Anyone who wants to trade it for a used sheet of red H3 let me know.

=====