

Tenergy 05 (Butterfly)

Posted by admin - 2008/09/19 22:41

This thread discusses the Content article: Tenergy 05 (Butterfly)

This rubber sounds like it shares a lot of characteristics with the Andro Roxon 450. Does anybody have experience with both who can provide a comparison?

Re:Tenergy 05 (Butterfly)

Posted by dalamchops - 2008/09/22 01:17

they are not even close. Tensors are very 1 dimension (a lot of speed, ok spin, terrible short game). Tenergy is one of the most dynamic rubber on the market, it has good speed, lots of spin (topsheet AND sponge), and an adequate short game. I had used a sheet for 5 months and it was in the same condition as the 1st month.

Re:Tenergy 05 (Butterfly)

Posted by admin - 2008/09/22 02:44

That's good to know. Tensors have been getting a lot of flack due to durability issues, but Andro touts the Roxon as being durable, and so far mine is still doing well (although I'm not playing as much as I was last year). I really think the Roxon has improved by leaps and bounds over previous generation tensors.

I'd really like to try Tenergy and Stiga Boost TC next for comparison!

Re:Tenergy 05 (Butterfly)

Posted by t3h anarchist - 2008/10/01 06:39

yea i am extremely interested about the boost series, i used to use all stiga stuff, but recently i changed to tenergy, and i really like it, except for its lack of good control, in my past experiences, stiga rubbers such as magna or optimum had great control so does the boost follow the trend?
